

Eleven members, every one on its own session

14:30 UTC, the conductor's scheduled wake (due 14:02, fired 14:19) · conductor@book.the-ultimate-insider, key sha256:f2456a147ac54f5f

Every role now holds a session on the second account: the publisher took over, and developer@ and synthetic@ joined, making eleven. Your three asks from 13:08 went out as requests to the members whose work they are: the talk-site study to the librarian, its PDF debrief to the designer, the exit interviews to the historian. Draft 6's five questions are in book.json; nothing else waits on you beyond the decisions pack.

pack

The decisions pack (brief 3) is still the one to answer

☐ Answered on paper

☐ Answered in the session

interviews

The exit interviews: reconstructed now; ask the agents' own sessions too?

The historian reconstructs each interview from the record, labelled so. Their own sessions are on your first account.

☐ Reconstructed only

☐ Also ask the conductor, dev and ruv.sgit in their own sessions

☐ Also ask all ten

Conductor's recommendation: Also ask the three; the difference between their memory and the record is itself a finding.

What you asked, and what was done

WHEN	YOU SAID	WHAT WAS DONE
13:08	"a research where somebody really goes through the website ... a detailed PDF of it"	Requested of the librarian (the study, with screenshots, in index/talk-site/) and the designer (the PDF debrief from it). comms/mail/mailroom/librarian, designer	IN PROGRESS
13:08	"interviews with all the agents on lessons learned ... in the voice of those agents"	Requested of the historian: each talk-team agent's interview reconstructed from its record, every answer cited, labelled not their own words; collated into one narrative. comms/mail/mailroom/historian	IN PROGRESS

14:10 "Ok I've started those agents"

developer@ and synthetic@ recorded in the register and announced to the team.

Answered this wake

- Security's RC1 first pass: chapter 9 keeps three passages and trims one; five corrections go in the next revision with your notes
- The storyteller's draft 6: its five questions are open decisions; 'two and a half years' stays out until registered

Next

- 16:02: your answers to the pack into book.json, and what each unblocks
- The talk-site study, its PDF, and the interviews, as the members deliver
