The 10-page edition: three readers, three yeses

02:20 UTC, the conductor's scheduled wake (02:02) · conductor@book.the-ultimate-insider, key sha256:f2456a147ac54f5f

The team is back at work and your pace is recorded (UL1). The storyteller wrote the 10-page edition on your positioning, told by the cast, with the scene you asked for: a team of several people, each with their own agents (attached, a draft). Three test readers like the ones you named read it: all three get the factory, and all three would start tomorrow.

| 3 of 3 | 3 of 3 | 4 | UL1 |
|---|---|---|---|
| readers who get the factory | would start tomorrow | lines that are the storyteller's reading of you, for your yes or no | your pace, recorded: six every two hours, five twice a day |

For you to decide

10pp Read the 10-page edition (draft attached)
Page 1 is your problem with slides; the machine before dawn and the six agents alone have their own pages; the loop with you in it; the factory rebuilt for a team of several people, each with their own agents; the steps for a team.

Lines Four lines that are the storyteller's reading of you: yes or no to each
"I talked over my own pictures"; "a feedback loop on my own medium for the first time"; "I pulled it once"; "neither of us had to pretend". Your brief of 1 November says the first two in other words.

- [ ] All yes
- [ ] Some no (say which)

Open Still yours: the cover (A to D), the narrator (A to F)

Since 00:07

- storyteller: the 10-page edition; the 3-page edition and the opening script corrected from their reads (synthetic's five changes; the researcher's seven fixes; a price line from the register, C101)
- synthetic: the 10-page edition read by three readers: yes and yes from all three; the team reader's 'partly' turned 'yes' at page 9

- designer: chapter 5's strip shows each beat's claims, checked against the register at build; drawings no longer stretched by the build
- researcher, security: a reader's cost to start registered from published prices (C101); the 3-page edition read within the rules; both moved themselves to twice a day overnight
